

DAILY TRACKERTaliban's extremist implementation of sharia law

1. Taliban is emerging as a reality. They had an image of anti-human rights during their first rule. They can set an example for the world if they follow the real Sharia law that includes women rights & not their interpretation.

Source: <https://mobile.twitter.com/AsianetNewsEN/status/1435589236644737028>

Human Rights under Taliban

1. Women in Afghanistan are ready to die but not stop raising their voices against Taliban. They are protesting for their rights and freedom. They said they must have the right to decide their destiny not Pakistan and not Taliban. They also added that they will not end the protest and are ready to die.

Source: <https://mobile.twitter.com/BBCYaldaHakim/status/1435240828335792128>

2. An all-female protest in Kabul's Dashti-E-Barchi. Despite the aggressive response from the Taliban, women in Afghanistan continue to show their discontent against the Taliban.

Source: <https://mobile.twitter.com/nabihbulos/status/1435450734892437505>

3. Several dozens of protesters march through the Dashti-E-Barchi neighborhood in Kabul, demanding women representation & progressing women's rights, since the promises made by the newly formed Taliban Government announced yesterday is seemingly more elusive.

Source: <https://mobile.twitter.com/yamphoto/status/1435466995693076482>

4. Anger mounting on the streets of Kabul with people of Afghanistan chanting "freedom" and "death to Pakistan". The demonstrators, many of them women, are in the centre of the Afghan capital.

Source: <https://mobile.twitter.com/ZionWarrior6/status/1435239716564176902>

5. The Taliban forces try to stop women protesters in Kabul while on the other hand these brave women stood still in front of them and continued their protest for their rights and freedom.

Source: https://mobile.twitter.com/hedvig_lindahl/status/1435553143811624963

6. Brave Afghan women are continuously fighting for their rights under the new oppressive and repressive Taliban regime.

Source: https://mobile.twitter.com/tamana_nasir/status/1435251470274760706

7. Mary Robinson calls on the UN Security Council to lead the international community's efforts to encourage the protection of Human Rights of all people in Afghanistan, with explicit respect for the "non-negotiable" rights of women and girls.

Source: <https://mobile.twitter.com/TheElders/status/1435246321221390343>

8. Taliban start shooting during mass peaceful demonstrations in Kabul. They are continuously trying to stop and disperse the crowd from protesting and thereby started firing .

Source: <https://mobile.twitter.com/Dhruvastronaut/status/1435152073272688645>

9. Today's protests in Kabul were the largest ever that Kabul have seen in history, hundreds thousands our out. It is Impossible for the Taliban to control the protesters.

Source: <https://mobile.twitter.com/AishaTalks/status/1435206755638816769>

10. Mazar-i-Sharif people are selling their belongings to feed their families or to leave asap as Afghanistan crisis prolong The current situation in the country have forced many to sell their belongings in order to survive under the Taliban controlled Afghanistan.

Source: <https://mobile.twitter.com/AfgFactChecks/status/1433021149827510275>

11. Resistance in form of human would be same as of this brave Afghan lady. More power to every Afghan individual who have risked their lives for their right freedom. And equality.

Source: <https://mobile.twitter.com/BanariBaloch/status/1435301038039310340>

12. Taliban Higher Education Minister says: Today's government in Afghanistan is led by people who have never been to colleges or high schools. Education is irrelevant as long as you are pious which will make you respected"

Source: <https://mobile.twitter.com/ObaidullaBaheer/status/1435550911846395905>

08 Sep 2021

13. This is the real face of Taliban. They have not changed, they are still the same. They are beating women openly who are peacefully protesting for their rights.

Source: <https://mobile.twitter.com/ZDaryabi/status/1435517968725778440>

14. Bacha posh' tradition of Afghan girls who live as boys may be threatened by Taliban. For centuries, some girls have lived as boys to secure freedoms that are denied to them as girls. This tradition is a reflection of patriarchy & an attempt to escape it.

Source: <https://mobile.twitter.com/PeterTatchell/status/1435589478907793409>

Current Situation

1. the #Taliban omitted Ministry of Women Affairs and replaced it with the Ministry of Amr bil Ma'ruf wa Nahy aan al Munkar (Promotion of Virtue and Prevention of Vice).

Source: <https://mobile.twitter.com/MalaliBashir/status/1435303129029906433>

2. Pakistan has deported over 200 Afghan nationals, including women and children, after the Taliban took control of Afghanistan. They crossed into Pakistan from different points and reached Chaman and stayed at a railway station there for a few days, but the authorities of the border town did not allow them to stay further there. Until the government gave permission for their stay, all Afghan nationals entering Pakistan illegally would be sent back.

Source: <https://www.thehindu.com/news/international/pakistan-deports-over-200-afghan-nationals/article36354318.ece>

3. The Taliban has formed a new, theocratic government in Afghanistan, weeks after the August 15 collapse of the internationally recognized administration in Kabul and within days of international troops' departure. Taliban leader Mullah Haibatullah Akhundzada, a hard-line cleric and former chief justice, has been named supreme leader. He will have the ultimate say in political, religious, and military affairs in the country under a system reminiscent of the clerically led establishment in neighboring Iran since 1979. Mullah Mohammad Hassan Akhund has been named head of government and will oversee day-to-day affairs. Mullah Abdul Ghani Baradar, a co-founder of the Taliban who previously served as one of Akhundzada's three deputies, will be Akhund's first deputy. Mawlawi Hanafi, a senior Taliban figure who served on the negotiating team at the peace talks in Qatar, has been named as Akhund's second deputy. Other key positions have been filled by two other deputies: Mullah Mohammad Yaqoob was named defense minister. Sirajuddin Haqqani, the leader of the Haqqani network, a powerful Taliban faction, will serve as interior minister. Sher Mohammad Abbas Stanekzai, has been named deputy foreign minister.

08 Sep 2021

Source: <https://gandhara.rferl.org/a/afghanistan-taliban-government-figures/31448372.html>

4. Report says Taliban use chemical weapons on Anti Taliban fighters & civilians in Panjshir valley in Afghanistan. Taliban is all the more aggressive and using the chemical weapons on the resistance forces in Panjshir.

Source: <https://mobile.twitter.com/savepanjshir/status/1435300639119003649>

5. For a generation that grew up with education, international investment and hope in a democratic future, reading that line must feel scarcely believable. The Western-backed Afghan government, backed by trillions of dollars in military support and training over two decades, had simply melted away. The mood among the inner circle of Ashraf Ghani, the Afghan president, was concerned, but not panicked, high-level sources told the BBC. A plan to secure the capital had been drawn up, and was being discussed with General Haibatullah Alizai, the chief of the army staff, and Admiral Peter Vasely, the top US military officer in Afghanistan. Central to the plan were negotiations to halt the Taliban advance outside the city gates. But even as Lt Gen Sadat met his top team, Taliban were taking over the largest city in the north of the country, Mazar-e-Sharif, and were beginning to pour into the eastern city of Jalalabad. Both cities were falling with barely a fight. Kabul was the last city standing. According to a source close to Mr Ghani, Mr Rahimi had been engaged in back-channel communications with the Taliban, and had managed to secure an agreement that the group would refrain from taking over the city by force, in exchange for an interim power-sharing deal. The circle around Mr Ghani himself was growing increasingly small and isolated. The only other people making key decisions with Mr Ghani were his national security adviser, Hamdullah Mohib, and his chief of staff, Fazel Fazly, several sources told the BBC. Meanwhile, a sense of deep uncertainty was beginning to set in across Kabul. While the speed at which the Taliban took Kabul on that Sunday afternoon was surprising to some, there had been clues elsewhere in the country.

Source: <https://www.bbc.com/news/world-asia-58477131>

6. CCP China will maintain communication with the newly formed Taliban government in Afghanistan.

Source: <https://mobile.twitter.com/timesofindia/status/1435525967577972740>

7. Taliban is straightaway firing on the protesters in the country. showing the real side that they were hiding. These protesters are fighting for their survival and freedom under the Taliban.

Source: https://mobile.twitter.com/mar_baluch/status/1435196676860530688